Story

Together Against Racism in everyday life!

Wednesday is Argiri's favourite day at school, because on this day his father always gives him a meal from his Greek homeland. His classmate Esmā comes from Syria. She still thinks often about her old home and her fight. She is happy to be able to live in peace now and loves to race with her friends in sports class. Max asks Olli why he can't run as fast, after all he is black. But Olli finds climbing much more exciting than running.

This narrative non-fiction book sensitises children insightfully to racism in everyday life and shows them how to live together in a respectful and fair way.

- For open interaction with each other
- Support for those concerned and their environment

- By Alexandra Ndolo, vice world champion in épée fencing and daughter of a Polish mother and a Kenyan father
